

Introducing the AEM Manufacturing Express: A Monumental Journey Celebrating America's Equipment Manufacturing Industry

What is the AEM Manufacturing Express?

The Association of Equipment Manufacturers (AEM) is hitting the road for the second year in a row to visit communities across Texas, the equipment manufacturing capital of the country. The tour will spotlight the 345,000 Texans – and 2.3 million men and women nationwide – who make the equipment that builds, powers, and feeds America.

The AEM Manufacturing Express kicks off in Mount Pleasant on August 1 and closes out in Hockley on August 28. We hope that you will join us along the way as we visit more than 20 equipment manufacturers across the state – highlighting the industry's economic impact, promoting the policies that keep the industry strong, and telling the stories of the men and women who make equipment in America.

Last year, the tour made over 80 stops in 20 states and hosted more than 100 lawmakers.

Why A Bus Tour?

The Manufacturing Express is AEM's most ambitious advocacy effort to date. From the heartlands of Alabama to the scenic vistas of Wisconsin, we're bringing the celebration directly to the doorsteps of equipment manufacturers, both large and small. They are the lifeblood of our economy, driving employment and commerce, all while enriching the fabric of our communities.

As we travel across America we'll be celebrating the individuals, families, and companies whose dedication powers, builds, and sustains our world. Along the way, we'll capture original media, captivating stories, and news of our journey on ManufacturingExpress.org, illuminating the profound impact of equipment manufacturing on cities, companies, and communities nationwide.

Now, more than ever, we must rally support for pro-manufacturing policies and raise awareness of the industry's significance. Together, let's ensure a brighter tomorrow, fueled by the resilience and ingenuity of America's equipment manufacturing industry.
